

Indigenous Engagement

Our Services

With every relationship, we strive to demonstrate our integrity by working together to overcome obstacles through pursuing design excellence and finding holistic solutions.

Below is a sample of our experience working with Indigenous communities. Visit our full list of services here.

ENVIRONMENTAL ASSESSMENTS AND REMEDIATION

Our approach with First Nations communities is to actively engage community members in the environmental assessment process for their own land. Arcadis IBI Group supports self-determination through robust Environmental Assessments, building capacity whenever possible and working in a Nation's best interests.

Our services include working alongside Nation members to provide environmental site assessment and/or remediation services to a growing number of First Nations in British Columbia.

RENEWABLE ENERGY AND ENERGY PLANS

We work with Indigenous Nations and communities to develop projects and plans that promote renewable energy. While leveraging underutilized land within the community, we identify solutions for affordable clean energy and help smooth the transition towards it. Throughout the process, we share our expertise to enhance the community's knowledge base on how to independently pursue the development process, expand capacity for future projects, and market carbon dioxide credits to enable energy sovereignty. In addition to our commitment to capacity building within the community, we ensure that a percentage of our suppliers and contractors are Indigenous on each and every project.

WOVEN - BROADBAND

Our Broadband Managed Services team engages with Indigenous communities to bring high-speed Internet to places that are often overlooked due to high implementation costs. We help clients secure grants and funding, design and manage the installation of fibre-optic networks, and offer open-asset network management of fibre-optic systems, allowing rural and remote communities to access the digital infrastructure that they require and deserve.
